

JAXPORT LEADERSHIP

NANCY RUBIN

SENIOR DIRECTOR, COMMUNICATIONS

Nancy Rubin joined JAXPORT as Director, Communications, in 2007 and was promoted to her current position in October 2012. Rubin has more than 25 years of experience in the communications field, both as a television journalist and media consultant to business and non-profit organizations.

Rubin serves as the port's primary spokesperson acting as liaison with journalists, broadcasts and publications from around the world. She assists JAXPORT leadership in communicating with its many constituencies including citizens and their representatives, media, port tenants and employees.

Beginning her career as a general assignment reporter in Bangor, Maine, Rubin went on to spend more than two decades with Jacksonville's WJXT-TV as an anchor and reporter. In addition to her on-air work, she developed public relations plans and materials for medical centers, schools and non-profit agencies serving the people of Jacksonville.

Rubin holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Broadcast Journalism with a minor in International Relations from Boston University.
